Anonymous Sexual Violence Hotline
Authored by Joe Vincent, M.L.S., Associate Consultant, TNG

We are in the process of evaluating our Title IX reporting structure, and I would like to know if you would answer the following: Does your Title IX reporting structure include a sexual violence anonymous hotline, if so or if not, what is the rationale?

Anonymous reporting hotlines are fairly widespread (across several areas of institutional misconduct response, not just sexual violence) and are considered a best practice. There are a lot of good reasons to provide one. Sometimes people are too frightened to use traditional reporting to tell us about very sensitive circumstances. They fear retaliation from their peer or working group, they fear the person who subjected them to the unwelcome behavior, or they fear the traditional means for reporting are not private. It is a way to get the information flow started, if nothing else.
