ATIXA Position Statement on Title IX, Gender Identity and Gender Expression

Founded in 2011, ATIXA is the nation’s only membership association dedicated solely to compliance with Title IX and the support of our more than 4,000 administrator members who hold Title IX responsibilities in schools and colleges. ATIXA is the leading provider of Title IX training and certification, having certified more than 2,500 Title IX Coordinators and more than 5,000 Title IX investigators since 2011. ATIXA releases position statements on matters of import to our members and the field, as authorized by the ATIXA Board of Advisors. For more information, visit www.atixa.org.

This ATIXA position statement reflects the importance of protections for gender nonconformity, gender identity, gender expression, transitioning and transgender status conferred by Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972. Allegations of such discrimination require a civil rights, equity-based response from any educational program or activity receiving federal financial assistance. ATIXA strongly endorses and supports these protections and encourages their full implementation within all schools, colleges and universities subject to Title IX.

Because the verbiage of Title IX itself is broad in its protections, the Department of Education’s Office for Civil Rights’ (OCR) interpretation of the law has evolved over time, progressively focusing on employment discrimination, equity in athletics, sexual harassment and sexual violence. We now see OCR widening the Title IX lens to focus on the rights of gender-nonconforming and transgender individuals to ensure their access to the full benefits of federally funded educational programs.¹

As early as 2001, OCR recognized that bullying and harassment of LGBT or gender-nonconforming students which is gender-based harassment—meaning harassment or bullying because a student does not conform to stereotyped notions of masculinity or femininity—is covered by Title IX. In fact, OCR’s October 26th, 2010 Dear Colleague Letter spoke specifically to the protections Title IX affords regarding harassment of LGBT individuals.

But OCR has not yet clarified whether Title IX covers discrimination on the basis of actual or perceived gender identity. This is an important distinction. ATIXA posits that intentional discrimination against a transgender individual because that person is transgender is, by definition, discrimination “based on sex.” In that case, evidence of gender stereotyping would not be necessary in order to establish that sex discrimination occurred against a transgender person. This is a position that the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission is now starting to take more broadly, and one which we hope OCR will follow.

Statistics published by the Transgender Law Center indicate that an estimated 2 to 5% of the population is transgender, meaning they experience some degree of gender fluidity. Recent research from the Human Rights Campaign, published as a study entitled Growing up LGBT in America, reflects a growing acceptance of LGBT youth by their peers, while simultaneously showing that LGBT youth are more likely than their peers to experience verbal harassment, exclusion and physical attacks at school. In addition, 78 percent of transgender Americans say they have experienced workplace discrimination at some time. A recent study\(^2\) of 150,000 college students by the Association of American Universities (AAU) found:

- Rates of sexual assault and misconduct were highest among undergraduate females and those identifying as transgender, genderqueer, questioning, nonconforming, and as something not listed on the survey (TGQN).
- Those identifying as TGQN have rates comparable, or in many cases slightly higher, than females, confirming prior research that has found these groups to be at high risk of sexual assault and misconduct.
- Acts involving penetration by force or incapacitation are considered the most serious types of sexual assault and misconduct. Undergraduates identifying as TGQN had the highest rates (12.4\%), followed by undergraduate females (10.8\%) and graduate TGQN students (8.3\%).

ATIXA supports gender nonconforming and transgender individuals enrolled and/or employed by schools and colleges and welcomes the diversity they bring. ATIXA hopes that our members will endeavor to assure that school and college communities will be safe, hospitable and supportive for those gender nonconforming and transgender individuals within our communities. Here are several starting steps ATIXA encourages its members to take:

- Show flexibility in housing assignments to reflect gender identity-based preferences
- Retrofit and design new facilities to create gender-inclusive restroom access without stigmatizing or identifying users
- Create work-arounds that allow for locker room access without stigma
- Include briefings on and protections for gender nonconforming and transgender individuals in school and college Title IX trainings and prevention programs
- Cultivate a culture of understanding about individuals’ name and pronoun choices, including proactively requesting information on health and academic records rather than placing the onus on trans individuals to self-disclose repeatedly

We hope that in the near future, OCR and the courts will provide clear guidance that discrimination based on gender nonconformity, gender identity, gender expression and transgender status constitute sex or gender discrimination under Title IX requiring a civil rights, equity-based response from any educational program or activity receiving federal financial assistance.
